Courts Without Jails

The Bedouin life isn't complete without restrictions as harsh as the desert

TV episodes, each of which tells the story of a conflict and its results, taking place in the desert, and then it's presented before a judge to issue a verdict about it between the conflicted parties with detailed description of the judge's procedures, starting from the process of choosing the judge and the sureties until issuing the verdict. It's like an unwritten desert constitution.

Summary

TV episodes, each of which tells the story of a conflict and its results, taking place in the desert, and then it's presented before a judge to issue a verdict about it between the conflicted parties with detailed description of the judge's procedures, starting from the process of choosing the judge and the sureties until issuing the verdict. The significance of the series stems from the presented cases and the characters of the judges (The conflict solvers) before whom these cases are presented to give a verdict, not to mention tackling the Bedouin judiciary legacy whose importance supersedes that of poetry, the salt and water of the desert.

Dramatic Treatment

The Bedouin life isn't complete without a judiciary system, as it organizes daily life and solves conflicts, and forms a law that guides the Bedouins through their daily life and solves their conflicts. It's like an unwritten constitution for life in the desert, widespread throughout the Arab World.

Production Value

This series was filmed with the latest equipment and devices that not only introduce the concept of portable cameras, but also represent the cinematic formula of visual formation. The costume and accessories design were unlike anything done before in Bedouin drama series.

Language
